Get Engaged!

Every graduate student is a member of GSG! Consequently, every graduate student is encouraged to participate in all GSG meetings and events. The GSG holds a monthly public meeting to discuss various topics and pass legislation. While this meeting is open to all graduate students, each academic program is officially represented by an elected senator. In addition, each graduate student can contribute by joining any of the various GSG committees, which focus on different topics such as diversity, sustainability, governance, organization of social and professional events, etc. If you want to know who the senator for your program is, become a senator yourself, or join a GSG committee, please contact us!

Building Bridges

GSG’s working theme for this year is Building Bridges, both between academic programs and between graduate students and the community. Carl Sagan believed that engaging the community by making knowledge accessible was an invaluable practice that could build the bridges necessary for inspiring public investment in discovery. Making ourselves and the knowledge we generate accessible is not only the key to understanding, but it is the responsibility of all of us investigating the truths that can foster change. Creative approaches to the challenges we stand to face will come from bringing minds of different fields of training together. The GSG is dedicated to bringing together research and exploration of diverse ideas that stand to inspire change and widespread public investment by making academic output accessible, auspicious, and laudable.
